SUMMARY—(Rule 2).

The Workmen's Compensation Laws, 1942 to (No. 2) 1944.

SUMMARY UNDER SECTION 14 (1).

Any workman in this establishment who suffers personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment after the 1st April, 1944, is entitled to claim compensation from his employer under the Workmen's Compensation Laws, 1942 to (No. 2) 1944, unless:—

- (a) the injury incapacitates him for less than seven days;
- (b) the accident was due to his own misconduct, e.g. being drunk or disobeying rules made for his safety;
- (c) the workman, killed or incapacitated, has deceived his employer by telling him that he had not previously suffered from a similar previous injury when he has so suffered previously;
- (d) the workman received a salary of more than £250 a year;
- (e) the work is of a casual nature not connected with the employer's trade;
- (f) he is a member of the employer's family;
- (g) he is engaged in agriculture, but not employed in connection with an engine;
- (h) he is a domestic servant, clerk, or shop assistant.

In order that a workman or his dependants may obtain compensation it is essential that notice of the accident should be given to the employer as soon as possible after it happens and before the workman has voluntarily left the employment in which he was injured and that application therefor should be made within six months from the occurrence of the accident or death. Such notice may be given either orally or in writing, to the employer himself or to the foreman or other official under whom the workman is working or any other person the employer may indicate
